Climate Neutrality - From Ambition Raising to Mission Zero

More and more countries, subnational entities and companies are committing to net zero emissions. The urgent question now is how to translate this vision into near-term action. Reaching climate neutrality requires not only a combination of national commitments, but a global mission that creates a connection between national climate targets, economic reforms and climate innovation. A small group of experts and stakeholders from politics, science, private sector and NGOs are invited to discuss: Where do we want to go? Where are we? And how do we get there?

Wednesday, May 05 2021 (all times in CEST)

12.00 – 13.00  Introduction and Session 1 “Where do we want to go: A future global vision towards net-zero”
Dirk Messner, German Environment Agency
Laurence Tubiana, European Climate Foundation
Yvon Slingenberg, European Commission
Jennifer Morgan, Greenpeace International

13.00 – 13.30  Session 2 “Where are we: The status quo of global climate ambition and efforts”
Deborah Ramalope, Climate Analytics
Sander Chan, Global Center on Adaptation

13.30 – 14.30  Session 3 “How do we get there” and Closing
Chris Stark, UK Climate Change Committee
Fatima Denton, UNU Institute for Natural Resources in Africa
Sigrid Nikutta, DB Cargo